Department of Korean Language and Literature Master's Program / Doctoral Program
Introduction
The Department of Korean Language and Literature trains talented human resources who aim for the world beyond regional culture and national development through education and research on Korean language and writing. With the awareness that professionals who create the future must pursue the universal common good based on communication and empathy skills, and have convergence skills and creativity, we provide necessary curriculums consisting of three areas: education and research on phonology, semantics, syntax, and history of the Korean language in Korean Language Studies; education and research on oral literature, Chinese literature, classic poetry, classic novels, and classic literature history in Classical Literature; and education and research on poetry, novels, criticism, contemporary literature history, and creative education and research in Modern Literature, with the aim of helping students understand and recognize the Korean language, Korean culture, and Korean identity.
